

CLAIMS

What is claimed is:

1. A method of characterizing a received e-mail, comprising:

Processing the e-mail to determine a source to destination path associated therewith; and

Based on the determine source to destination path, assessing a probability that the e-mail was actually sent from a "from" address associated with the e-mail, purported to be the source of the e-mail.